

Janis,

We apologize for the delay in getting this note to you, but since our wedding on May 20 we have wanted to tell you what an incredible job you and your band did, and how the sounds of the Janis Nowlan Orchestra truly made our affair one to remember. Virtually all of our guests, from our college friends to elderly relatives to the rabbi commented on how much they liked the band. "How did you find them?" or "The band is really terrific" were common refrains. "They didn't play a bad song" was another. Amy's dad, who normally shies away from parties, said that, "even I had a good time." He was prepared to go through the entire reception with plugs stuffed in his ears, but he never needed them. The sound engineer did his job well. I'm not sure how you did it, but you did manage to "read the crowd" and figure out what songs would get them on the dance floor and keep them there.

For us, much of the party was a blur and I don't think either of us could name more than a half dozen songs that were played. But it all appeared seamless; from the music at the ceremony to the jazz cocktail hour to the reception. And we did stop a few times and take in the grandeur of the Lincoln Ballroom, the buzz of the guests, the swirling symphony of vocals, brass, bass and percussions, the "retro" and elegant look of the band, and think, "this is pretty cool."

Throughout the wedding planning process, of all the vendors we dealt with, you were certainly the most dependable, attentive, and professional. We would certainly recommend the orchestra highly to anyone who asked. And we greatly appreciate the fine attention to detail you showed for our first dance, which sounded great and served to capture the excitement of the moment and the levity and breeziness we brought to the occasion. We just wanted to say thank you, let you know we couldn't say enough good things about you, and heard dozens of compliments from our guests.

Sincerely,

Bryan and Amy
